

Why we are here.

We're here to radically improve website building.

As a former web agency, we built thousands of sites on multiple platforms for a diverse group of businesses. Our company consistently experienced platforms like WordPress fall short – so we built a new platform, the platform we needed.

And now we're bringing it to the world.

Statement

A site builder made by people that build sites

The.com Sites™ was built from the perspective of a professional. We understand what's missing in tools like WP because our team spent eight years building sites for clients as an agency and led projects for Cloudflare and Google. We took note of the shortcomings and baked our findings into a beautifully simple and refreshingly powerful new platform. It's completely unrestricted so any design or piece functionality can be built on Sites™. The.com Sites™ also integrates workflow so every part of your build process can be managed on the system from content gathering, to build, to site management.

Sites™ is also radically different from any website builder or CMS you've used in the past. It's light and utilitarian. So light that it simply floats in front of your website like inspect element. And it's robust – the entire system relies on cells in a sheet which gives you direct access to any element on the screen allowing you to build exactly what you want, how you want.
